Corn Silage 2014 Newsletter

This year is way too reminiscent of last year. As such, I've scheduled a larger than normal number of corn silage moisture monitoring events, to attempt to help with corn silage harvest management. Weather may dictate some of our timing, if it gets too cold, but remember that, after tasseling, number of days is actually more important than heat units. In general, about 50 days after tasseling is when corn silage will be ready to harvest, but obviously dependent on what type of structure you are filling.

An event I do not have full details on at this moment but that is scheduled for Wednesday, October 8 near Lena is a Soil Health & Soil Quality Field Day. Jamie Patton, Shawano County UW-Extension, myself, and Dan Olson (host farms & Byron Seeds rep.) Will be sharing soil health management information and monitoring techniques for you to use on your farm. Watch next newsletter, newspapers, or contact me for details as we get closer to that date.
